EDUCATION

"Education in Argentina." Argentina. Web. 13 Apr. 2010.

http://www.argentour.com/en/argentina/education\_in\_argentina.php

I used this website for information about the free schooling that they receive in Argentina. It explains the life a person who decides to pursue higher education.

"Education in Argentina." Embassy of Argentina in Canberra, Australia. Web. 13 Apr. 2010.

<http://www.argentina.org.au/education.htm>

This website gave me a basic overview and structure of the education system in Argentina. There are some statistics of literacy rate university attendance.

"Argentina-Educational System-Overview." StateUniversity.com. Web. 13 Apr. 2010.

<http://education.stateuniversity.com/pages/56/Argentina-EDUCATIONAL-SYSTEM-OVERVIEW.html>

This website has the times of day that students attend school. It goes more in depth of how the university system works.

<http://www.argentina.org/education.htm>

This article talks about Argentinian education and the ages that are mandatory for children. It also talks about the school curriculum.

http://www.argentour.com/en/argentina/education\_in\_Argentina.php

This talks about how education is very valued. It talks about the ages for school attendance and uniforms for schools.

<http://campus.fortunecity.com/recess/715/index.html>

It talks about the history of Argentinian education and how it was under strict control of Catholic churches to being banned.

Wikipedia - Argentina: Education

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Argentina#Education>

While Wikipedia is not a reliable source for information, it does serve as a nice spring board and search engine for information. Wikipedia articles often reveal interesting insights into a given topic and provide resources to find more reliable information.

Embassy of Argentina in Australia - Education

<http://www.argentina.org.au/education.htm>

As this is a government website, one would assume that the information given is reliable. The website itself seems rather old fashioned with a simple layout and a kitschy gif of an Argentinian flag waving.

Argentour.com - Education in Argentina

http://www.argentour.com/en/argentina/education\_in\_argentina.php

This website seems more professional than the last website mentioned. It's in English, as were the first two, and has a more modern and professional layout, giving it an air of reliability.

StateUniversity.com - Argentina-Education System-Overview

<http://education.stateuniversity.com/pages/56/Argentina-EDUCATIONAL-SYSTEM-OVERVIEW.html>

This website offers a lot of great information on education in general, let alone, breaking it up into the different countries. Their information is often informing and direct, making it easy to find information. The site looks very professional.
